Dear Mr. Echols:

On August 15, 1967 the fifth Fellowship in Congressional Operations for Executives will be coming to a close and [redacted] will be returning to the Central Intelligence Agency. This year's program, conducted again in cooperation with the American Political Science Association, has received high praise for the experiences and insights gained through full time work assignments in the offices of Senators, Representatives, and Congressional committees. Comments and evaluations by the participants indicate they have acquired a practical understanding of the legislative process and of Congressional responsibilities.

All the agencies that have participated may take justifiable pride for their part in this important effort toward better coordination and improved communication between the executive and legislative branches. You can be especially proud of the calibre and performance of Mr. [redacted]. Our own favorable impressions and those of the APSA staff are further validated by glowing statements by members of Congress and by their requests to have the services of future Fellows.

When Mr. [redacted] returns to the Central Intelligence Agency, it is our sincere hope that his assignment will provide opportunity for new challenges and make maximum use of the knowledge and insights he has certainly gained during the past year.

Sincerely yours,
